defense. Like I said, I don't think the Government believes it's Brady, but we summarized the information to -- for the defense with respect to the other individuals.

And we also provided separately in connection with the motions that they may want to do the statements of the co-defendant as well because that's something else Mr. Brafman had raised, as saying there could be Brady within that information. So, what we did was we provided both defendants' statements of the other defendants, which we hadn't done previously.

There's no additional production to be made. We provided them with the statements that these individuals made that Mr. Brafman alluded to, and that's what it is. They obviously are free to go ahead and follow-up with those individuals if they want to or do whatever they want to do. To the extent that they are unable to get additional information from them, we've already provided them with that information.

So, I don't know what additional productions

Mr. Brafman's responding to, but, obviously, the Government has turned over everything that we have in our possession in terms of Rule 16 discovery. We haven't withheld anything from them.

THE COURT: I think the concern that I heard $\mbox{Mr.}$ Brafman articulate was that it was only with prompting and USA v. Shkreli, et al.

THE COURT: The biggest reason, frankly, is the Second Circuit clearly told District Courts that we don't have the authority to order production of 3500 material before the times set forth in statute. As a matter of custom and practice, the U.S. Attorney's Office, at least in the Eastern District, do try to provide it in advance of the time prescribed in the statute.

But I would just urge the Government to please put them at ease, review the documents, and provide additional materials. If you have a sense that it may be Brady or exculpatory, err in favor of providing it.

MR. PAES: Yes, your Honor. We will take a close look at all the 302s and reassess. If there's something that even comes close to the line, we'll be happy to provide it.

MR. CHAN: Can I just add that part of the reason why he's saying that there's appropriate disclosure here of Brady material — we're not asking for early 3500 material — the appropriate disclosure of Brady in this particular context requires attention to the specific wording of what was said by these consultants to the Government.

And, so, while paraphrasing in certain instances may be sufficient under the law, here the specific circumstances of the wording chosen by the witness when they first told the Government that the services they did were legitimate, the full scope of it, how long, this practice versus that firm records.

I'm just concerned. You're welcome to give me the authority for the relief that you seek. I haven't closed my mind, but I've started to look at this issue because --

MR. BRAFMAN: Your Honor, we will either provide your Honor with the authority to do this in an ex parte fashion that satisfies you or we'll then ask for the Court to order the subpoenas and then we'll share the materials.

What he successfully litigated this before Judge

Batts in the Southern District on a separate matter. It was six or seven years ago, and I will look at the law again, but in that case the materials were, to my recollection, submitted to the Court, the Court ordered us to have them.

I'm not certain we're going to stand on ceremony here. Our objective is to get the material. But we will file the Rule 17(c) subpoena as quickly as we can. Once the Rule 17(c) subpoena is filed, and depending on the Katten law firm's position, that's going to impact, I think, significantly on what we believe to be a motion for severance based on the fact that I can already in good faith say to you, your Honor, that the Defendant Martin Shkreli has perhaps the most relevant reliance on counsel defense I've ever encountered.

And with great with respect for Judge Weinstein, who I've tried many cases in front of and I don't think there's a 1 Katten and other entities in terms of the privilege.

So, I do believe Mr. Brafman has a point with respect to the Katten documents. We have reason to believe that Katten is in possession of a large number of documents to which the Government is not entitled, to which there is privilege and there are some issues there, and we believe it's complicated, and to which there hasn't been a waiver of the privilege.

MR. PAES: I'm not sure whose privilege Mr. Brodsky is referring to because it seems that what Mr. Brodsky is saying is that the privilege was not Mr. Shkreli's, from what I hear right now.

MR. BRODSKY: That, I am not sure about. That, I am not a hundred percent sure about.

Mr. Greebel did not represent Mr. Shkreli in his personal capacity, but that does not mean Mr. Shkreli may not have a privilege claim to other documents.

MR. BRAFMAN: Your Honor, just so the record is clear as far as Mr. Shkreli is concerned, we take the strong position that Mr. Greebel during the relevant time period wore two hats: He was Retrophin's counsel and he was Mr. Shkreli's personal counsel.

I will also suggest, respectfully, that reliance of counsel defense is interposed prior to trial and it may be a basis for a severance. But before I need to do that, I have a right to see the materials so I can determine whether or not I want to waive the privilege.

So, my request of Katten is that they turn over our records, because it's Mr. Shkreli's privilege that he may or may not wish to waive, and, depending on the ultimate decision, then we can decide whether we invoke the reliance of counsel defense at trial, which I have suggested is in all likelihood a genuine reality, but it's hard to make that decision without seeing the records.

And I take issue with Mr. Brodsky's suggestion that during this period Mr. Greebel was not Mr. Shkreli's lawyer, which is one of the reasons why I think you're ultimately going to be faced with the severance issue to be decided based on two prongs: One is if there is a reliance of counsel defense, it's almost impossible to have the joint trial; and, second, it may be very severe and antagonistic defenses interposed in this case by the respective defendants.

I am aware of the steep climb that the defendant has in trying to get a severance, but, to be candid, Judge, it's hard for me to imagine a joint trial in this case where either defendant gets a fair trial.

MR. PAES: Your Honor, I think we'll address, obviously, the severance motion in our papers, so I won't belabor that. I think the case law even in a situation like this is pretty clear as to whether severance is appropriate.
